

Engineering Intern

HeathCo LLC, producers of Heath/Zenith electrical products for the home is synonymous with quality, integrity and innovation around the globe. We are committed to developing products that enhance our customer's lives through peace of mind, safety, and convenience. As we continue to develop innovative products, we seek a qualified individual to join our Engineering Team.

Engineering Intern will follow acceptable lab testing procedures to evaluate product enhancements, cost reductions, alternate manufacturing methods and new product developments per direction from engineers. The employee is responsible for accurate reporting of results and formats.

Duties & Responsibilities:

- Construct prototypes for testing.
- Evaluate components and products per test procedures.
- Maintain a neat and orderly work environment.
- Write test reports and document test data.
- Evaluate various products, components and consumer returns.
- Provide internal and external technical service support.
- Perform problem solving and troubleshooting via verbal and/or electronic communication.
- Provide installation and operating instructions for Heath/Zenith product line.
- Collect product data and provide basic analysis to report trends.
- Perform other duties as assigned.

Basic Qualifications:

- Junior level or above electrical engineering education at a College or University with ABET accredited electrical engineering program.
- Excellent communicate skills.
- Strong analytical skills, math, reasoning.
- Proficient with Microsoft Office, email, and internet.

APPLY, students may submit resumes to: careers@heathcollc.com